ChromaLuxe

The Art of Aluminum

HD Aluminum Prints has long specialized in producing the highest quality fine art and photographic prints. Owner Randy Hopfer has been doing dye sublimation prints for over 20 years, his passion stemming from his own photography background. When ChromaLuxe began offering their large coated aluminum sheets, Randy quickly fell in love with their quality and durability.

“No other substrate that I know of brings the color, the beauty, and the feel of dimensionality that the coating brings out on the ChromaLuxe product.” - Randy Hopfer

“No other substrate that I know of brings the color, the beauty, and the feel of dimensionality that the coating brings out on the ChromaLuxe product. With the different finishes that are available, I think it’s by far superior than any other print type,” Randy noted. His customers felt the same, spreading their love for the ChromaLuxe panels, and demand grew.

Kinetic sculptor Daniel Goldstein reached out to HD Aluminum, in Vancouver, Washington, to print the panels for his massive scale art installation for a South Carolina airport. The finished project would be 9 feet tall by 176 feet wide, with over 100 panels making up the background. Double-sided printing was needed for hundreds of smaller hanging panels to create the kinetic effect of the piece. HD Aluminum was able to press the image on the back and front of the Chromaluxe panels simultaneously and then cut out the smaller pieces for perfect alignment. The results were stunning.

"I could not do what I'm doing without ChromaLuxe. I don't know of any other product and material out there that would do what I want,..." - Daniel Goldstein

"I could not do what I'm doing without ChromaLuxe. I don't know of any other product and material out there that would do what I want," said Daniel of the project. "Color is very, very important to me. If you look at my work, it's all about color, a smooth gradation, and surface. And ChromaLuxe does exactly what I'm looking for."

ChromaLuxe panels are favorites in the fine art community because their coatings deliver clear, vibrant colors with unmatched durability, perfect for long term installations.
