North Central College and Naperville artist Marilyn Dale present Between the Lines, a moving solo exhibition that translates over 500 World War II-era letters into evocative mixed-media paintings.

These deeply personal letters were written by the artist's father, Chester, to her mother, Irene, while he served in the Pacific Theater in 1944 and 1945. Though never overtly romantic, his letters—written nearly every day when possible—reveal a quiet emotional intimacy, even as he shielded her from the horrors he was experiencing. Six months after the war with Japan ended, the couple married.

The letters had been saved for decades, surviving a shed fire and a move, then sat untouched for 25 years following Irene's death. When Dale retired as a marketing executive in early 2024, she returned to her first love—artmaking—and finally turned to the project that had long lived in the back of her mind: transforming her parents' wartime correspondence into an exhibition. Several months into the work, Dale realized the timing held deeper significance—2025 marks the 80th anniversary of the end of WWII in the Pacific, officially declared on September 2, 1945—also Irene's birthday.

In Between the Lines, Dale incorporates many of the actual letters, personal photographs, devotionals, and wartime ephemera into the layered surfaces of her paintings. The work explores three emotional currents that run through the correspondence: longing—for love, family, and normalcy, faith—in survival, in God, and in the power of prayer, and camaraderie—the constant, unspoken bond between soldiers who endured the unendurable together.

Between the Lines is both an act of remembrance and a quiet revelation of how love took shape not in grand gestures, but in daily words, faithfully written across oceans and silence.

Schoenherr Art Gallery, Wentz Fine Arts Center, 171 E. Chicago Ave. Naperville IL 60540, is open to the public Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2-7pm and Saturdays from 11 am to 4 pm. A free reception for the public will be held on Veterans Day, Tuesday, November 11, 2025, from 6-8 pm.
